

International Conference on Pesticide Application for Drift Management

Waikoloa, Hawaii
October 27-29, 2004

pep.wsu.edu/Drift04/

This international forum will bring together leaders in research and technology, as well as educators, manufacturers and governmental regulators from Europe, North America, Australasia and other continents. These scientists, industry leaders, educators, and regulators will share the most current knowledge related to pesticide spray drift, its concerns for human health and the environment, meteorological factors, product stewardship, adjuvant chemistry, drift reduction technology, computer modeling and best management practices. It is the intent of the organizing committee to provide the state of the art in spray drift knowledge and to close the conference with two distinct workshops focusing on drift models from the U.S., Australasia, Canada, U.K. and Germany, as well as to initiate working groups to develop globally harmonized core educational spray drift principles and best management practices for 1) aerial, 2) airblast, and 3) ground application equipment. The conference will encompass discussions related to agriculture, urban areas, aquatic sites, vector abatement, and forestry. It is our anticipation that the energy generated from the international networking will result in activities that continue well beyond the close of the meeting.

October 27 and 28

Invited Presentations Representing Australia, Canada, Denmark, Germany, Italy, United Kingdom, and United States from University and Government Research, Educators, Application Equipment and Chemical Industries, and Federal/State Agencies (topics noted on back)

October 27 and 28

Exhibitor Booths, Submitted Poster Session

October 29

Optional Modeling Workshop, including Spray Advisor/Manager, AGDISP Forestry model, AgDRIFT, SpraySafe Manager, Vector control models, DRIFTSIM, UK models, orchard model, and DropSize, etc. from Australia, Canada, Germany, New Zealand, United Kingdom, and United States

Anticipated Invited Presentations

Keynote Address

The Importance of Spray Drift Management around the World

Incentives for Drift Management

Spray Drift and Human Health Incidents
Measuring Human Exposures from Spray Drift
Impacts of US Court Cases on Applic. Technology
Protecting Aquatic and Riparian Areas
Balancing Drift Management with Biological Performance and Efficacy

Regulatory Issues

Australian, US, German, UK, Scandinavian, and Canadian Regulations
Aspects to Consider for Vector Control
State-Specific Drift Rules to Provide for Protection and Enforceability
State and Regional Perspectives on Management of Drift and Secondary Movements

Drift Mitigation Technologies

Nozzles for Drift Management
Aerial, Ground Field, Vineyard, and Orchard
Sprayers for Drift Management
Precision Ag and Drift Management
Pesticide Chemistry and Adjuvants

Environmental Conditions

Meteorology
Hedgerow Filtration and Barrier Vegetation
Crop and Canopy Effects

Drift Research and Management

Regional and Local Herbicide Transport
Spray Drift Reduction Technology Plan
Establishing Buffers: Protocols and Toxicological Benchmarks
Laboratory Measurements for Droplet Size
International Standards and Drift Reduction

Applicator Education

Teaching Applicators How to Measure Climatic Conditions
Nozzle Selection Guidelines for Optimum Efficacy and Drift
Information Transfer Disconnect: Technology, Labels, and Applicators

Best Management Practices Workgroups

Core Educational Principles: Meteorology, Droplet Size, Volume of Spray, Nozzle Technology, Concurrent BMP Sessions: Ground Boom, Airblast, Aerial-Agriculture, Aerial-Forestry, Vector Control Application

Organizing/Advisory Committee

Andrew Hewitt, Co-Chair, Spray Drift Task Force
